

POLYSIGNAL

A multi-source Polymarket edge engine

TWO-YEAR BACKTEST · SURVIVORSHIP-CONTROLLED · REPRODUCIBLE

We measured the edge. Then we wrote down the receipt.

polysignal watches Polymarket's sharpest wallets and texts you the moment they pile into the same bet. This is the honest, reproducible answer to the only question that matters: does following that smart money actually beat the market price?

THE RESULT THAT MATTERS

The market said one thing. The outcomes said another.

We rebuilt the actual smart-money accumulation signal from public trade history and checked it against gold-standard settlement. The honest column is QUALIFIED: a wallet only counts as smart at a signal's moment if it had ALREADY proven itself on earlier, separately-resolved markets. Zero look-ahead. That is the number we stand behind.

Implied vs. actual win rate

Metric	Optimistic	Qualified
Resolved signals	2537	1294
Win rate	63.0%	64.9%
Implied entry	57.8%	58.6%
Edge vs market	+5.3%	+6.3%
Net ROI (after cost)	+7.2%	+8.9%

Optimistic = today's leaderboard (survivorship-inflated).
Qualified = point-in-time proven wallets only.

Edge survives the honesty test.

Controlling for survivorship made the edge bigger, not smaller (+5.3% -> +6.3%) -- proven wallets are simply more selective.

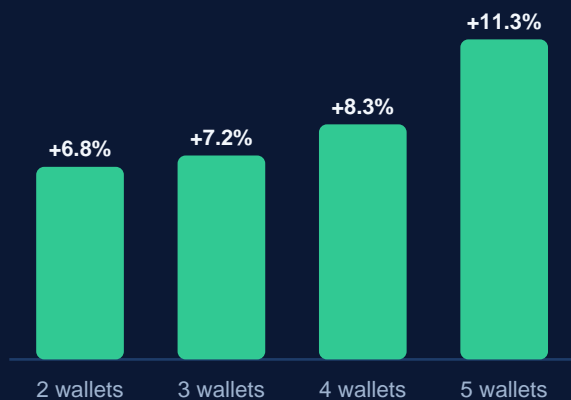

IT IS NOT ONE LUCKY SETTING

The more smart wallets confirm, the bigger the edge.

A real signal should get stronger as more proven wallets pile into the same side. It does. Across the full parameter grid -- every combination of 2 to 5 confirming wallets and 24 to 96-hour windows -- net ROI stays positive in all twelve cells, and rises with confirmation.

KEPT HONEST

- › Signals skew to sports favorites near 58c -- a real but concentrated lane.
- › Entry uses the price smart money paid; you see it slightly later, so live capture is a bit below the headline.
- › Resolved markets only; this is a measured historical edge, not a guarantee.
- › Past performance is not future performance. You act at your own risk.
